

List of Assessors, S&V Round 36 and Round 37

Introduction

This is a list of all individuals that provided qualitative assessment support for applications received under Rounds 36 and Rounds 37 of Sound & Vision.

Assessors

1. Máire Moriarty

Máire Moriarty is a barrister, researcher and broadcaster. She is a former series presenter with TG4. In tandem with practising at the bar, Máire is an independent researcher, and has worked with various production companies, including researching a factual entertainment TV series for TG4 (Gléasta Chun Féasta TX Oct 2017); a documentary series for TG4 (Tabú TX 2018); and various documentary projects including "Will Ireland Survive 2050?" (RTÉ TX 2019), and "Hawks and Doves" (RTÉ TX 2020). In addition, she worked as a broadcast researcher on Newstalk FM in current affairs (The Pat Kenny Show).

2. Tomás Ó Síocháin

Tomás Ó Síocháin is a freelance producer, editor and journalist. He spent 14 years with RTÉ, during which time he worked both at home and abroad with RTÉ and TG4 covering news, business and sport on television, radio and online. In 2011, he produced both the General Election Leaders' Debate and Presidential Candidates' Debate for TG4. During ten years as Programme Editor producing and editing news and special event coverage he also produced and presented a number of single camera documentaries on politics, development and aid issues and human rights in Europe and South America.

3. Elaine McElroy

Elaine McElroy is a Development Producer and Script Editor in children's animation. She is currently based in Manchester, UK, developing TV series with animation studios. Previously Animation Development Producer at BBC Children's, other credits include Script Editor on Series 3 of Go Jetters for CBeebies, on Emmy nominated comedy education series Ask Lara, and on Toot the Tiny Tugboat. Elaine has also been an external assessor and script reader for a variety of funds and schemes, reviewing TV Series and Feature Film proposals across animation and live action. Earlier roles also include Development Producer at Red Kite Animation, and Animation Producer at Super Umami.

4. Colman Hutchinson

Colman Hutchinson began his TV career with RTÉ before spending 3 years as senior researcher for 'The Late Show'. In the late 1980s Colman moved to England and worked as a freelance researcher and associate producer on a wide range of entertainment programmes and produced successes such as 'Blind Date', 'Surprise' and 'Schofields Quest'. As Head of Entertainment both Hat Trick Productions and Celador Productions he helped develop and executive produce a variety of entertainment shows including 'Whatever You Want', 'Who Wants To Be A Millionaire', 'Winning Lines', and 'Passport To Paradise'. He also co-created 'Brainiest', a hit format in the UK for ITV1 and licensed to fifteen territories worldwide. In 2011 Colman set up 'Boxatricks', a format creation/consultancy company and executive produced Primetime game show series 'High Stakes' for ITV. Colman is on the Advisory Board of The Entertainment Masterclass.

5. Mark Story

Mark Story is a graduate in Law from Trinity College Dublin. He is a graduate of Wharton College University of Pennsylvania's Executive Development programme and Manchester Business School's Programme for High Value Managers. Dubliner Mark's broadcasting career spans 40 years and he has worked in Ireland as a producer for RTÉ and Programme Director for Century Radio and in the UK as a senior producer at Capital Radio, BBC Radio One PD at Virgin Radio. More recently he was MD of Radio for Emap/Bauer where he managed both Magic 105.4 which he founded in 1998, and Kiss 100. In 2008, he started his own Radio Consultancy Radio Story and has in that time worked with clients in 18 countries including NRJ France, Radio City India, Newstalk, Today FM and 98FM in Ireland. Radio Zet in Poland, RTL Germany, Guardian Media Group and Bauer Radio in the UK, and Radio Miraya in South Sudan. In July 2013 Mark was named as one of the 40 people who had made the greatest contribution to UK Commercial Radio during its 40 years. Elected a fellow of the UK Radio Academy in 1998, the highest honour the UK radio industry can bestow, Mark was awarded the UK Radio Industry John Peel award in 2007 for his "outstanding contribution to UK music radio" He was awarded the only Special Sony Gold award ever for organising and chairing the UK Radio Aid response to the Tsunami in 2005. The day of programming, broadcast over 268 radio stations achieved the highest recorded listening for any UK programme and raised £3 million for victims of the Tsunami.

6. Vincent Delaney

Vincent Delaney is an accomplished, experienced journalist. He is an RTÉ veteran, having joined the Newsroom in 1979 as a RTÉ Radio 1 Sub-Editor, and recently retiring from the position of Assistant News Editor of Radio News and Head of RTÉ 2FM News. He also served Public Service Broadcasting as a Programme Editor, Editor of RTÉ News on 2FM, and as Chief Sub-Editor RTÉ Radio 1 News. Vincent has had his finger on the pulse of news and current affairs for more than 40 years; quick to spot a news story, good ideas and social developments. He is renowned for his early recognition of broadcasting talent and journalistic ability and his commitment to encouraging and mentoring their development. Earlier journalistic experiences include feature writing, reporter, sub-editor and editor in magazines and newspapers. Vincent enjoyed a period of writing and performing in clubs throughout the UK and in Dublin.

7. Simon Devilly

Simon Devilly is a former senior producer with RTÉ; during his 16 years, there he was producer /series producer of a wide range of current affairs programmes, features series and documentaries. He is a former associate lecturer in journalism and radio production in The School of Communications at DCU. He also lectured and designed courses in Radio production at the Centre for Media Studies at NUIM and continues to teach post-graduate students at St. Patrick's Maynooth. He has served as a judge on the PPI / BCI annual radio awards for a number of years. He is a former member of the Irish Executive Council of the National Union of Journalists.

8. Agnes Coogan

Agnes Coogan was one of the first women to be appointed TV Producer/Director in RTÉ and in Ireland, and served as Senior TV Producer for fifteen years working on documentaries, Irish language programmes, Young People's, arts, music, current affairs, religious, agriculture and educational programmes. Subsequent to that Agnes worked as a free-lance TV producer and director on programming for RTÉ, TG4 and others, and also worked as originator, script-writer and presenter on radio programmes in Irish and English, principally for Lyric FM.

9. Patrick O'Driscoll

A graduate of Dun Laoghaire Institute of Art, Design and Technology (National Film School), Patrick began his career as a screenwriter on shorts and features for independent producers supported by the Irish Film Board (Screen Ireland) and RTÉ. Since 2009, Patrick has worked as an independent development consultant and script editor, collaborating closely with writers and producers from Ireland, UK, US, Canada and Australia on high-quality fiction and non-fiction film and TV projects at the early, mid and final stages of development. Based on his creative and analytical experience, in recent years Patrick has designed and taught screenwriting courses for beginner and intermediate level writers and published craft articles in Irish and US trade magazines.

10. Seamus Hanrahan

A graduate of Communication Studies from DCU, Seamus began his career as a researcher and scriptwriter before becoming a television producer/director. Specialising in education, training and instructional design, he directed many series of distance learning courses broadcast by satellite from UCD. He has over 10 years of experience in broadcast television programming and one of his programmes was RTÉ's entry for the prestigious Japan Prize. As an instructional designer, he has created multiple media education and training materials for home, school and business use, most designed for delivery over the internet and intranets.

11. Deirdre Donnelly

Deirdre Donnelly has been working in the media sector for over 20 years and has extensive experience in print, radio and television. After a number of years working in advertising and sponsorship across a wide range of media outlets, Deirdre started working as a TV announcer on RTÉ One in 1997. She later moved to radio where she was an announcer on RTÉ-Radio One and later a researcher / reporter on some of the station's arts and features programmes. She worked for a number of years with RTÉ-Raidió na Gaeltachta where she presented and produced a wide range of series. She also reported regularly on news, current affairs and a cross section of arts and features topics. She has been an independent radio producer since 2008 and has received nominations for Gradam Cumarsáide an Oireachtais and PPI awards. Most recently she received Simon Cumbers Media Funding to travel to Africa and make a radio documentary for Newstalk. She is also a freelance journalist and over the last two years has contributed as a reporter, panellist, columnist and reviewer on a wide range of programmes across a number of radio stations, including RTÉ-Raidió na Gaeltachta, Newstalk, Raidió na Life and Dublin South FM. In 1990, she graduated from UCD with a B.A. (Hons.) in Irish and French and then completed a Post Grad in Marketing from DIT. She received her M.A. in European Studies in 2004 completing a thesis on the TV industry in the EU. She also has a diploma in advertising (media buying and planning) from DIT and a diploma in stockbroking investment from the Dublin Business School.

12. Seán Geogahan

Seán Geogahan trained in radio production (journalism), worked as a sound recordist for pop promos and broadcast video offline editor. Sean scripted, directed and produced via an independent video production company. He is a NFTS graduate of direction. He worked with BBC/HBO/TG4 and ITV as a director of television drama. He also worked as a BBC commissioned script writer and for Channel Four Films and independents as a script reader. He is an independent Film maker and prize-winning short film maker of drama which has been broadcast Europe and US networks.

13. Brendan Gormley

Brendan has a degree in Communication Studies from Dublin City University where he majored in radio production. For over 15 years he has worked in public service radio broadcasting as a sound recorder and editor as well as in studio production on a wide range of genres including features, documentaries and drama.

14. Lawrie Hallett

Lawrie Hallett has a long-established background in professional broadcast radio production and presentation, creating both music and speech-based programmes for local and international broadcasters. Trained as a radio journalist, he spent part of the 1980s working in Ireland and has since worked for both the UK's Community Media Association and Office of Communications, in various policy areas including community broadcasting and digital radio. Now a Senior Lecturer in Radio and Journalism at the University of Bedfordshire, he teaches radio production and researches broadcast radio policy issues. Based in Norwich, England, Lawrie is currently on the board of the local community-based charity, Future Projects, which runs the city's community radio station, Future Radio.

15. Julian Vignoles

Julian Vignoles worked at RTÉ in both radio and television for thirty-three years, as producer and commissioning executive, beginning his career on Radio 2 in 1979. He moved to Radio 1 in 1985, became series producer of several daytime programmes and won three Jacobs Awards for his documentary work. In television, he was involved in both producing and later commissioning successful Entertainment and Factual programming. He oversaw Ireland's Eurovision Song Contest involvement for several years and also served on the Contest's governing body. Since leaving RTÉ, he has published three books, the most recent a biography of Rory Gallagher in 2018.

16. Davy Sims

Davy Sims began broadcasting in 1978 as a presenter on Downtown Radio where he was best known for championing bands from Ireland, North and South. In 1986, he moved to BBC Radio Ulster to start The Bottom Line (now 30+ years on, still going as Across the Line). From 1989 to 1991 Davy was in London working for BBC Radios 1 and 4 producing social action programmes and documentaries. As Chief Producer, he led Youth Programmes before returning to Belfast to work in current affairs, magazine, and music programmes. In 1999 he became the first producer in BBC Northern Ireland Online. From 2001 to 2008 he was Editor New Media leading a team producing web and mobile, interactive TV, and community outreach. Post BBC, as Head of Social Media in the charity Public Achievement, he worked with young people training them to make their own media and taught Radio Production and Audience Analytics in Dublin Business School. He has won several awards in Belfast, Dublin, London, and New York for radio and web production.

17. Lorelei Harris

Former Head of Arts and Cultural Strategy for RTÉ Lorelei Harris is an internationally acclaimed and award-winning documentary maker who has worked with RTÉ for over thirty years where she spent many years as a Radio Producer, Commissioning Editor and Editor for Radio 1. She has extensive experience in commissioning into the arts and cultural sector and of related financial/contractual/editorial management. In addition, Lorelei has very significant experience in public engagement and collaborative arts/cultural media projects at national, community and local level.

18. Marina Hughes

Marina co-founded and ran the production company Venus Productions from 1996 through which she produced films with BBC Films, Canal +, Gota Films, Irish Film Board, Miramax Films and RTE. She is a former member of the Advisory Committee of Screen Training Ireland (STI) the Irish national screen industry training agency. Her feature film productions have been presented and won awards from festivals such as: Sundance Film Festival, Seattle Film Festival, BANFF Canada, Variety Critic's Choice, Karlovy Vary Film Festival, London Film Festival, International Television Award (Premiere Ondas) Barcelona, Spain. Best International Short – Venice International Short Film Festival. Jury Award, Giffoni Film Festival, Italy, Best Film Hayange Festival, France, Distributors' Award, Oulu Film Festival, Norway Jury Prize, Olympia Film Festival, Thessaloniki., and Jury Prize, Celtic Film and Television Festival, Special Commendation, Prix Europa Berlin. Feature Films she is currently developing as Executive Producer include the Romanian co-production Blindsight (writer/Dir Adrian Sitaru), Choice (Writer/Dir) Gerard Stembridge and Easy Does It, Writer/Dir Marian Quinn. As well as Producing and developing productions, Marina also lectures in Media Management and the Film Industry at the Technological University, Dublin and is Visiting Professor at the faculty of Theatre and Cinema, University Babeş Bolyai, Cluj, Romania where she teaches courses on Film Production and Marketing and also co-ordinates the Atelier Du Film, with the writer/directors Adrian Sitaru and Radu Jude at the Technological University, Dublin.

19. Stephen Plunkett

Stephen Plunkett is a graduate in Art History from Trinity College, Dublin. He began his 35-year broadcasting career as a newsreader with independent station Sunshine Radio whilst continuing to administer a national annual art exhibition, Exposure, which he and a friend had started together as undergraduates. Moving to RTE, he worked in a range of television roles, from script supervisor to production manager, before moving to the independent commissioning unit where he commissioned primetime programmes across several genres from comedy to current affairs. These included Ireland's first feature animation and its first Oscar-nominated animated short, 'Give Up Yer Aul Sins'. As a staff producer/director, he worked in documentary, arts, entertainment and children's programmes and he also directed Fair City for several years. Later, he was Executive Producer in Young People's Programmes, where he was responsible for a staff of over 60 people producing 300+ hours of programming annually. Since leaving RTE, he has continued to work as a broadcast consultant and in the voluntary sector.

20. Maretta Dillon

Maretta Dillon is an independent film and arts consultant who has long and varied experience of working in the cultural sector in Ireland. Previous work experience includes: Co-Director of Light House Cinema, Director of access CINEMA, Programme Director of Dublin Film Festival. Maretta has knowledge and expertise in film curation, film programming as well as providing evaluation expertise on film and arts projects. She also works as a digital content and social media manager. Maretta is currently acting as Film Adviser to the Arts Council.

21. Dusty Rhodes

Dusty Rhodes is an award-winning presenter/producer with 30+ years of national radio experience. After presenting with the UK's Atlantic 252, and ten years with Irish national broadcaster RTÉ, Dusty established Ireland's most successful syndicated radio company, Digital Audio Productions. The company produced music programmes for commercial radio, magazine & documentary programmes for RTÉ Radio and won several PPI awards. Today Dusty is behind dB Digital Broadcasting who operate DAB transmission networks and DustPod.ie who create broadcast quality podcasts for leading brands.

22. Tracy Geraghty

Tracy Geraghty is currently head of Project Development at Dublin City Council Culture Company. She was a senior member of the cultural team for Galway 2020, European Capital of Culture and had responsibility for programme development and European relations during the bidding and transition phase. Previous experience as Manager of the Galway Film Centre, saw Tracy working with young filmmakers, community groups, primary and second-level schools and young and adult film-making workshops. Tracy was a Project Manager on feature and documentary films for Euroimages, the Council of Europe's pan European co- production fund.

23. Sheila De Courcy

Sheila is an independent consultant and producer with over four decades of involvement with media, arts and cultural organisations in Ireland, Europe, USA and India. Previous experience includes almost six years working on conservation and exhibitions in the National Museum of Ireland following which she spent over 30 years in RTÉ. There she produced, directed and commissioned programmes for RTÉ Television and Radio across all genre including Arts, Drama, Irish language, Current Affairs, Music, Documentary, Children's and Entertainment. Sheila also led the launch of RTÉjr, RTÉ's third TV channel, across all platforms. An experienced teacher, mentor, board member and facilitator Sheila is currently working on a broad range of creative and practical projects.

24. Anne Roper

Anne Roper has a career spanning over 25 years as a writer, TV producer, director & documentary maker. As an Executive Producer, she created and was Head of the RTE TV Factual Documentary Unit. She has also produced radio, published fiction and journalism for The Irish Times, Irish Independent, various magazines and online. She troubleshoots documentary structure, story, script and editorial. She creates and facilitates training courses for the broadcast industry including a RTE Producer/Director curriculum, modules on journalism, visual storytelling, scripting, story-telling, directing and multi-platform content (with an emphasis of self-shooting). She created the successful RTE training day 'Bring on the Women' which offered media skills for women and 'Doc on the Box' an initiative for new directors. She has been a Reporter, Presenter and appears on both broadcast and public panels with a special interest in media, creativity, ethics, journalism, diversity and the importance of public service broadcasting as the lifeblood of democracy.

25. Paul Sheehan

Paul has worked for 14 years in independent local radio in Ireland in a variety of capacities – as a broadcaster, journalist, producer, programme controller and CEO. Paul has worked for three years as a producer and programme editor in BBC radio in the UK.

26. Francesca Lalor

As Commissioning Editor and Series Producer of the multiple award-winning Documentary & Drama On Newstalk 106-108fm Series, Executive Producer Francesca Lalor was responsible for the development and delivery of a wide range of feature-length radio documentary and drama projects for a national commercial radio station, and related financial/contractual/editorial management. With a background in live radio production, Francesca has overseen the commissioning, funding, production and broadcast of upwards of 250 feature-length documentaries and radio dramas on Irish radio in the past decade, managing a large team of Independent producers both in Ireland and abroad. As an Award-winning Independent Producer, Francesca Lalor has produced 21 documentary/drama features and executive-produced many more. She also works as a Consultant to Independent production companies and training organisations, delivering training in the area of radio features production, sourcing funding, and broadcast best-practice. She is an Associate Lecturer in Radio Features Production at Masters level at DLIADT and Griffith College. Educated in Brussels, Francesca speaks fluent French.

27. Cólín Ó Cearbhaill

Cólín is a graduate of Dublin City University and in addition has a postgraduate higher diploma in Applied Communications from NUI Galway. He has over 20 years television experience on over 50 productions across the genres of drama, documentary and lifestyle. He has worked as an online finisher on Irish productions such as 'Kings', 'Raw' and 'Single Handed' and as colourist on 'The Savage Eye' 'Dirty Old Towns' and 'Celebrity Apprentice' amongst others. His work in recent years has been concentrated in the main on editing on productions such as 'Dúshlán', 'Ask Rhod Gilbert', 'Monumental' and 'Hector USA'.

28. Caroline Mitchell

Dr. Caroline Mitchell is an Assoc. Professor of Radio and Participation in the University of Sunderland. Her research and practice are centred on community media production and cultures of transnational community radio and women's/feminist radio. Dr. Mitchell was co-founder of Fem FM, the first women's radio station in the UK (1992) and she co-curated a digital archive of the station in 2014. She has published widely about women and radio, including the edited volume 'Women and Radio: Airing Differences', (Routledge, 2000). As PI for 'Transnational Radio Encounters', she researched ways that community stations use radio to connect transnationally with similar minority ethnic, social and cultural groups. This research group commissioned the online interactive platform radio.garden that has attracted millions of users since its launch in 2016. She co-ordinates ArtWorks-U, a support network for artists and creatives working in participatory settings which is part of the national Artworks Alliance group. She is also an executive producer for the weekly radio programme ArtyParti which won 2016 Community Media Association award for best arts radio programme.

29. Miriam Judge

Dr Miriam Judge is a lecturer and researcher in the school of communications in Dublin City University, Ireland. Her research area of expertise is in the field of digital learning and she has managed both national and international research projects in this field including a recently Erasmus+ funded project on digital assessment for learning - the DALDIS Project. Before joining the academic staff at DCU Miriam previously worked in the audio visual industry as a Corporate Video Producer/Director, researcher and scriptwriter and in the computer industry in a training and instructional design capacity. During that time she also established the first training course in the Gaeltachta in conjunction with Udaras Na Gaeltachta to train the first cohort of Irish speakers in video and T.V. production in advance of the establishment of TG4.

30. Mike Beale

Mike has worked in television production and distribution for over 30 years producing shows all over the world. Currently at ITV Studios overseeing the non scripted and format development pipeline as MD Global Creative Content. Mike started out in children's TV at TV-am then joined Planet 24 as they launched The Big Breakfast before joining various production companies including LWT, Bunim Murray, Hat Trick, BBC going on to co-found 12 Yard Productions and Alchemy Reality. Mike's global experience from this was also utilised to launch NBCU's move into global production before joining ITV Studios.

31. Anna Lee

Anna Lee has considerable experience of the local/community development sector with a particular focus on the development of anti-poverty / social inclusion strategies. She was CEO of South Dublin County (formerly Tallaght / Dodder Valley) from 1991 until 2014. Anna has contributed to policy development at national, regional and county level She chaired the Combat Poverty Agency from 1995 – 2001 and currently chairs ActionAid Ireland and the Tallaght based Village Counselling Service. She is a member of the Board of the Foundation for Investing in Communities, St Stephen's Green Trust and Focus Ireland.

32. Nessa McGann

Nessa McGann is a professional radio programmer with over 20 years experience in management, training and development in the Irish radio sector. Nessa was Station Manager of the community student radio station Wired FM (2001 – 2007) and Station Manager & Content Director with the regional youth radio service Spin South West (2007-2020). Nessa has contributed to policy and training development in the sector, including in her volunteer representation roles as Chairperson Craol, the training and representative body for the community radio sector and as Chairperson Learning Waves Skillnet, the commercial radio industry training body responsible for developing training and upskilling people working in commercial radio.

33. Yvonne Igoe

Yvonne Igoe has worked as a reporter, producer and researcher on a variety of radio stations and programmes, including RTÉ Radio news, LMF, Raidió na Life and Near FM. She has a particular interest in the community radio sector, having been the station manager in Flirt FM in Galway and a volunteer and editorial board member with DCU's Dublin Weekend Radio. Prior to relocating to the West of Ireland, Yvonne was a lecturer at the Dundalk Institute of Technology, where she taught Radio Production, Film Theory and Media. She has composed soundtracks for short films produced under the RTÉ/Filmbase short film scheme and the Film Institute of Ireland Outreach programme. Yvonne is a QQI-accredited trainer. Her research interests include Irish language broadcasting, Irish cinema and media, and music in film and television.

34. Niamh Farren

Niamh has over ten years' experience in the community media sector, ranging from volunteer programme production, to training and development, community outreach and management. She is a former member of the Board of Management of Dublin Community Television. In 2007, she completed a master's degree in Communications and Cultural Studies at Dublin City University, where her thesis proposed a framework for measuring quality in community radio. Niamh is Communications Officer with AONTAS, the National Adult Learning Organisation, a membership NGO which promotes lifelong learning.